In Warwick Castle shall thy Sword be kept, To witness to the world what thou hast been, And least forgetsul time should intercept, A President, I present will begin; The Castle-keeper shall receive a Fee, To keep thy sword in memory of thee. Thy Armour likewise, and thy Martial Spear, That did thee service in thy high designs, Shall be preserved very caresul there, That all such men as have distrustsul minds, May think (if from a truth it did not grow) A King would scorn to cozen people fo. And in thy Chappel (distant thence a mile) A bone shall hang of that same cruel beast, Which near to Coventry remain d long while, Whofe rib by measure is six foot at least; Destroying many that did pass that way, Until thy manhood did the Savage slay. That by tradition, men may...
